Olivia Block (Chicago) is a media artist and composer who performs live experimental music using electronic instruments, piano, organ, amplified objects, and field recordings. Block also creates surround sound concerts and sound installations. At Sun-Ray Cinema, she will be presenting the world premiere of her most recent surround sound composition, a piece titled “Breach.”

This multichannel sound composition contains field recordings from various locations within the San Ignacio Lagoon in Baja California Sur, Mexico. Additionally, Block includes synthesized audio material in response to the field recordings, placing the listener in the lagoon from multiple points of view—underwater, on the shore, and inside of imaginary seascapes.
